Since 2010, Manual Cinema has been creating works of live performance that combine handmade shadow puppetry, cinematic techniques, and innovative sound and music to tell immersive stories. Using vintage overhead projectors, multiple screens, puppets, actors, live feed cameras, multi-channel sound design, and a live music ensemble, Manual Cinema seeks to transform the experience of attending the cinema, imbuing it with aliveness, ingenuity, and theatricality.

The story of Mementos Mori was written collaboratively by the five artistic directors of Manual Cinema, who were interested in creating a piece responding to how modern technology—particularly smartphones and social media—has shifted our relationship with presence and absence, death and dying. The idea was for the piece to follow multiple characters whose stories would unfold this theme in different ways, and that one of these characters would be Death herself. After development workshops at the University of Chicago and the Almanack Arts Colony, Mementos Mori received its world premiere at the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago in 2015. Since then, it has toured nationally and internationally, including at the Noorderzon Performing Arts Festival in the Netherlands. As Manual Cinema frequently does, it returned to the piece in 2017 to revise, refine, and update the storytelling.

Creating any Manual Cinema show is a complex process, and the scope of Mementos Mori’s story posed particular challenges. Mementos Mori uses close to 500 different shadow puppets and slides over the course of the show. Since there is little to no dialogue, nearly every second of the performance is sound designed and scored with original music. In the beginning stages, Manual Cinema’s creation process looks similar to that of an animated film—the story is rendered into storyboards, and simple animatics are created for the composers to begin scoring. A “demo” version of the show is cut together like the first cut of a film. Once actors, puppeteers, and musicians are added to the mix, the process transforms into a theatrical production, as the artists explore how to execute the complex choreography and intricate sound world in a live context.

 Screens are ubiquitous in our everyday lives, but in Manual Cinema the imagery of the screen is the product of live humans executing physical tasks with virtuosity in real time in the same space as the audience. The aim of any Manual Cinema show is to take the visual and sonic vocabulary of film and television—a vocabulary that, growing up saturated by media, we all share—and use it to explore themes and stories that are weird, powerful, human, and theatrical.
