If we are to believe history, no other play gave Chekhov so much trouble as his last, The Cherry Orchard. You can see this clearly when you read his letters—they were veritable laments. He had an idea that it was not he himself who was guiding his hand across the blank pages, that he wasn’t succeeding in putting down what he wanted to write, but that for reasons unknown to him something was writing the play totally of its own accord, without him being able to do anything about it.

Chekhov had promised everyone that he was going to write a very funny comedy, but his play grew more and more somber by the day. He had promised his wife, the actress Olga Knipper, a comical role, but he sketched a frail, sophisticated woman who always felt guilty about everything and at the same time always wanted to have her own way.

Chekhov wanted to describe a man who shapes history with his own callused hands, uncompromisingly, even with cruelty, but also justly in a certain sense. And at the same time, it is clear that he himself was also a victim of that history—a cruel, passionate victim, full of anger and love.

No matter what he wrote, Chekhov always wrote first about himself, looking around with an ironic eye. Although he may not have always wanted us to laugh at his characters, he did want us to smile at them. Yet under his pen, all of the characters are impregnated with the immense compassion of the author, his tenderness, his love, and his understanding.

After the premiere in the Moscow Arts Theatre (January 17, 1904) in the staging of Stanislavski (Alekseev) and Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, Chekhov grumbled: “He spoiled my play, Alekseev did.” But one could almost hear the author say at the same time, “He spoiled my play, Chekhov did.”

The Cherry Orchard is the most performed play Chekhov ever wrote, but over time people have realized that it is one of the greatest comedies in theater. Even though it is not a comedy that makes us laugh, that amuses and entertains us, it is a great comedy such as life inflicts upon us every day—the Comedy of History in which we are the characters. And in which life becomes part of the history. From the historic point of view Chekhov’s last play is the most realistic of them all. It is both a historical chronicle and a prophetic vision. It is hard to comprehend how Chekhov could have anticipated with such strong intuition and precisely 14 years in advance what was going to happen to Russia and to the world—only 14 years left to go, but 14 years nonetheless. And perhaps not only what was going to happen, but what is still happening in Russia and in the world to this day.

So as historical criticism, this play always remains topical. It has become a kind of myth about the unpredictability of history and simultaneously about its predictability, about people’s lack of power over their lives and fate, but also about their amazing strength and responsibility in terms of that life and fate, about their capacity to protect themselves and remain true to themselves—despite everything.

Yes, it was undoubtedly not Anton Chekhov but the Chekhovian Genius incarnate that guided his hand as word after word of The Cherry Orchard’s magical text appeared on the pages of the manuscript.

MALY DRAMA THEATRE

The Maly Drama Theatre was founded in St. Petersburg in 1944, a time when many theaters were evacuated from the city. Founded by the Regional Executive Committee, the small company performed in the region's towns and villages, although it was little known in St. Petersburg. Efim Padve became chief director in 1973. He asked renowned playwrights as well as younger directors to work with the company, including Lev Dodin. Dodin first staged The Robber (by Karel Capek) in 1974 at the Maly Drama Theatre. In 1983, Dodin became artistic director. Currently, the MDT is regarded as one of the top Russian theaters and has garnered worldwide acclaim for its inventive productions. Dodin's laureled staging of Fedor Abramov's Brothers and Sisters was presented in the 2000 Lincoln Center Festival, and his production of Life and Fate premiered in 2007 in Paris. A group including the company's actors and Dodin's final year students were able to conduct rehearsals at Auschwitz and in the former Soviet Union's gulag country, located in northern Russia. The Maly Drama Theatre has 58 actors and participates in leading cultural festivals internationally, in addition to giving regular performances in St. Petersburg.

LEV DODIN (director) was born in 1944 in Siberia, where his mother was evacuated during the war. As a youth, he studied theater at the Leningrad Young Artists' Theatre. After high school graduation, he attended Leningrad Theatre Institute, studying with Boris Zon, a student of Stanislavsky. Dodin's directorial debut was in 1966 with a telecast of First Love based on the story by Ivan Turgenev, followed by dozens of shows at theaters in St. Petersburg, Moscow, and internationally. They included It's a Family Affair—We'll Settle It Ourselves, Rosa Berndt, The Mirror, The Golovlev Family, A Gentle Creature, and Bankrupt. Opera productions he directed include Elektra for the Salzburg Festival, Mazeppa at Milan's La Scala, Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District for Florence's May Festival, The Demon at Paris' Châtellet, The Queen of Spades (Amsterdam, Florence, Paris, Moscow), and Chovanshina at the Vienna State Opera. The first work he directed for the Maly Drama Theatre was Karel Capek's The Robber in 1974, then Abramov's The House in 1980. Since becoming Maly's artistic director in 1983, his works include Brothers and Sisters, Lord of the Flies, Gaudeamus, The Possessed, Stars in the Morning Sky, Desire Under the Elms, The Cherry Orchard (1994), Chevengur, Claustrophobia, King Lear, A Play with No Name, Uncle Vanya, Life and Fate, Love's Labour's Lost, Long Day's Journey into Night, Three Sisters, Portrait with the Rain, Love and Intrigue, An Enemy of the People, and The Cherry Orchard (2014). In 1967, Dodin began to teach acting and directing. He is a professor at the St. Petersburg Academy of Theatrical Arts and chair of the directing department. He has taught several generations of actors and directors; many are currently associated with the Maly Drama Theatre. Dodin's productions have garnered international laurels, including the state prizes of Russia and the USSR, the Triumph Independent Prize, Golden Mask National Awards, and a Laurence Olivier Award. He received the European Theatre Award (2000) and the Russian Presidential Award (2001). He is the Honorary President of the Union of European Theatres.

ALEXSANDER BOROVSKY (set designer) was born in Kiev in 1960, and in 1983 graduated from the production department of the Moscow Art Theatre School. Throughout his career he has designed more than 100 productions in the most famous Russian theaters—Sovremennik Theatre, Oleg Tabakov's Theatre, Mayakovskiy Theatre, Satira Theatre, Moscow Art Theatre, Malaya Bronnaya Theatre, Satirikon Theatre, Stanislavsky Theatre, Maly Theatre, Maly Drama Theatre, Alexandrinsky Theatre, and the Bolshoi Theatre, among others. As a set designer Borovsky has worked in many theaters in Finland, Bulgaria, the US, Denmark, Austria, and other countries. Borovsky is a repeat winner of the Golden Mask National Theatre Award for Best Designer in Drama. He has won the Stanislavsky Award and many other theater awards, is an Honored Artist of the Russian Federation, and won the State Prize of the Russian Federation. Borovsky works as a designer-in-chief for the Theatre Art Studio, Oleg Tabakov’s Theatre, Theatre Meyerhold Centre, and Moscow Art Theatre. He began working with Lev Dodin in 2007 on the performance of Love’s Labour’s Lost. This collaboration has since thrived, including Long Day’s Journey Into Night (2008), Lovely Sunday for Creve Coeur (2009), Portrait in the Rain (2011), Love and Intrigue (2012), An Enemy of the People (2013), and The Cherry Orchard (2014) at Maly Drama Theatre. He designed Chovanshina at the Vienna State Opera directed by Lev Dodin.

DAMIR ISMAGILOV (lighting designer), born in Moscow in 1959, in 1987 graduated from the production department of the Moscow Art Theatre School. He has worked with Moscow Art Theatre since 1977 (since 1987 as chief lighting designer) and has designed about 90 productions there. Since 1996 Ismagilov has worked for the Bolshoi Theatre (since 2002 as the chief lighting designer). He has contributed to productions in leading Russian theaters such as Mariinsky Theatre, Oleg Tabakov’s Theatre, Maly Theatre, and others. He has designed more than 350 productions. Since 2000 Ismagilov has taught at Moscow Art Theatre School as the chair of creating external forms in a theater production. He published a book entitled Theatre Lighting (2005) with E. Drevaleva, and was named an Honored Art Worker of the Russian Federation. Ismagilov is chief lighting designer at Theatre Art Studio, Bolshoi Theatre, Moscow Art Theatre, Novosibirsk Theatre of Opera and Ballet, and Gelikon Opera. He is also vice chairman of the Russian Association of Lighting Designers. With Lev Dodin and Alexander Borovsky, Ismagilov has designed such productions as Lovely Sunday for Creve Coeur (2009), Love and Intrigue (2012), An Enemy of the People (2013), and The Cherry Orchard (2014) at Maly Drama Theatre. He designed the lighting for Chovanshina at Vienna State Opera directed by Lev Dodin.
